OUTCOME OF DOUBLE-HEADER LAST SATURDAY WAS PLUMB LOVELY

Lexington High Defeats Louisvills Males and Wildcats Muss Up the Wilmington Eleven.

RHODES AND SHRAEDER STARRED

The double bill on Stoll Field, Satarday, proved one of the best offerings in the gridiron line State has booked this season. The Lexington High School eleven outclassed the Louisville Male High team in a 15 to 0 game, and the Wildcats swamped Wilmington 33 to 0.

The day was chilly and the field was slippery, but nevertheless a surprisingly large number of bugs were on hand at 1:15.

The High Schools Go To it.

The Lexington-Louisville scrap was the best half of the show from a sportsman's standpoint. The youngters demonstrated that their respect-ve elevens are the exponents of the highest class high school football in the State. The result shows that the local High School has put out a team the larger sister city.

Both teams showed to advantage in aggressive play, and frequently both goal lines were saved from trespass only by fumbles.

In blanking Louisville, the Orange and Black lads put up a fast article of ball. In open work and line plunging the local back field easily outclassed the visitors, and the Lexington line was aimost impregnable. Rhodes was easily the star. His line plunging and open field work was in university class, and his punting and passing were particularly effective. His 40-yard placement was a beauty, and is one of the few clean placekicks ever pulled on Stoll Field. The offensive work of Allender, and Red Riley's game in the line deserve special mention.

Captain Finiey and Cowles were the only visitors who were able tot make (Continued on page 6).

EDITOR'S NOTE.

The following poem is one of the latest works of Mr. Blevins, and in this epic of early Kentucky life the powers of the writer are openly displayed. Ills story of the exodus of the grim-visaged pioneer into the throes of the "dark and bloody ground" is wafted on pinions of martial verse and reads like cavalcades of soldiery marching in triumphal tread. It is peculiar to note that outside of the epic creation the young author has unusual strength at handling the lytic.

Mr. blevins has the fire and ambition to become a reputed writer and his alms have a great scope in the versatility of his poetic temperament. We are glad to get this story in verse for the supreme merit embodied in its orderly constructed lines.

From time to time requests have come from various students and alumni that a volume of the young Kentncklan's labors be published and dedicated to the University, including among its many beautiful pieces the class-day poem he is preparing for the exercises next June. This would be indeed a commendable thing for all who know of his work, being a fitting memento and souvenir to crown the best of college recollections. The Idea is ready to aid any movement in such a direction if sufficient pressure recommends that the distretion avoiding the strong enough to make it succeed.

THE KENTUCKY PIONEERS.

Sound the horn upon the mountains,

Call the settlers from afar, Blaze a trail through trackless woodlands, Wide the western gates unbar. Let the hills of old Kentucky Hear once more the shrill war-song. As the canvas covered ox carts Through the valleys wind along. Never from a heathen altar, Never from a conquered king. Was a grander trophy rescued Than the heritage they bring. While the Cumberland rolls onward-While the rushing torrents bound-Shall the growing pageant journey To the Dark and Bloody Ground. Lo, the brave adventurous Teutons, Crowned with honors dearly won, Weary of their ancient homeland, Travel towards the setting sun. Let the cowards and the traitors Now forsake this fearless band For the lurking savage waits them In this wild and hostile land. Here from many a deadly ambush Shall the winged arrows fly And the flames of burning dwellings Soon shall light the midnight sky. Onward like a mighty army Led by hopes of courage bred, Move the deer-skin coated settlers O'er the trails with life blood red. See the forests fall before them-Cabins rise beside the streams-Fields of maize and waving barley In the autumn sunlight gleam. Fast before their deadly rifles Flees the painted savage on, And the ox-drawn car of Progress Seeks the way which they have gone. Days of toil and nights of danger, Lives of hardships and of pain, Death and gnawing famine follow Close beside their thinning train. Oft the sounding forests echoes With the Redman's piercing yells, Loud the tumult and the shouting, In the rude log fortress swells. Hear their war cry, as they gather, While the widow's cry ascends, Savage blood shall be the ransom On to Raisin and revenge! Load the rifles! Fill the knapsacks! Whet the keen-edged hunting knife! Orphan children morn for fathers, Eye for eye and life for fathers!"

Look! again another picture,
Nobler, grander than the last,
Fills the soul with sweeter pleasure
Than the one which we have passed.
From the scene hath gone the settler—

Gone the forest from the hills-Gone the forts beside the rivers-Gone the ancient water mills. Cattle graze where once the wigwam Curled aloft its wreaths of smoke, Steamboat whistles now awaken Echoes which the oars awoke. He is gone—the howling savage, And the nights no more resound As he followed in the chases Close behind the baying hound. He is gone—the hardy settler, Gone the humming spinning wheel, With its mellow plantive music, As the flax sang on the reel. They have gone—the old traditions, Vanguished like the stars of night, As above the east horizon Breaks a purer, fuller light. But the land their blood hath purchased, Rich with all its wonderous store,

Rich with all its wonderous store,
By their valient sons and daughters
Shall be guarded ever more.
Year by year in song and story
Shall their mighty deeds be told
And the earth shall hold them dearer
Than famed Ophir's gems and gold.

Through the storm and strife of ages,
Through the tumult of the years,
Wisdom's voice shall guide their children,
Hopes' shall still their doubts and fears.
Where the sons of Freedom gather
And the drums of war resound,

In the forefront of the battle
Shall Kentucky's sons be found.

—C. E. Blevins.

IN FAR FAMED OLD KENTUCKY.

tt's up in Old Kentucky, where they never have the blues, Where the Captain kills the Colonel, and the Colonel kills the booze, Where the horses they are pretty, and the women they are—too, Where they shoot men for pastime when there's nothing else to do.

Where the blood it flows like water, and the bullets fly like hall. Where every plstol has a pocket, and every coat has a tatl. Where they always hang the jury, but they never hang the man, Where you call a man a liar, and then go home if you can.

Where you go out in the morning, just to give your health a chance, And they bring you home at nightfall, with buckshot in your pants, Where the owl's afraid to holler, and the birds don't care to sing.

For it's hell in Old Kentucky, where they shoot them on the wing.

WHEN ITS SNOWING.

Brumal aspect adorns the land;
The trees are bare, and boreal winds
Sift the feath'ry sprites thru the air,
Flying, falling easing downward,
Thick from the sky-like clouds
They come a host, pleasant to the eye

And suggestive to musing winds
They sound a latent melody.
There is a joy in the snow flakes,
A retrospection sweet to me—
It forms a visionary picture
Of a happy juventity.—H

THIEF!!

On the Western plains, when the border was dashing and impulsive, the horse and cattle thieves were hanged without the verdict of trial. It was a case where legal procedure had force and zest by its absence. The ancient and indigenous Germans, although barbarous, spent no sympathy on their thieves. They tortured them until they, despairing, died. A good custom everywhere and at all times to be severe and harsh with the courageless and dastard thief. The robber employs audacity and defiance; evasion and mean, shrinking cowardice are the instruments of the thief Faise to his neighbor, thwarting the human scheme of God, the enemy of notion that evil deserves a harsh truth, dire foe of every goodness and in fact, he licked the glue from it and traitor to his mother, how ultimately and supremely damnable is a thief! We are expecting him to give "Wiil Your Dreams Come True," in which some of the following questions are

Isn't it the man with the healthlest mind who wins success? What did Napoleon think was the greatest faculty of the mind? How can we ieran to think only practical thoughts? Why dld Macbeth see a dagger in the air, and John on the island of Patmos "a new heaven and a new earth?" Do you believe that poor thinking is the greatest waste? What kind of worn pays the highest wages? Why did Dickens seclude himself five hours of each day? Did Luther hit the devii when he threw the ink bottle at him? What quality of the mind has led to the luvention of two hundred and fifty different creeds in our country? Why is one man an inventor and another unable to run a machine?

What is the mental difference be tween Franklin and the Indian who shoots an arrow into the heart of a thunder storm?

Why dld Joan of Arc become a great military leader and the other French maidens stay at home?

what quality of the mind makes a man a success in making money? Why does a designer of clothing ceive ...,000 a year while the cutter gets $1,500?

Why did it take from 1817 to 1863 to learn to shoot an oil well?
